Light Housekeeping . . . or Lighthouse Keeping?

There is a difference you know! Read the title again and decide for yourself which way you are making your plans for the future.

Living from day to day with no thought for the future is all right for the light housekeeper who cares not for tomorrow. But if you are planning for your future after your retirement you may well deserve the name lighthouse keeper. Your future is being built on bedrocks as this lighthouse was.

Today's modern lighthouses stand in contrast of those of yesteryear. They may well be compared with the man who plans for his future.

Years ago the lighthouse keeper lived a lonely life in the lighthouse, keeping oil lamps burning. He worked alone. Modern lighthouses are generally equipped with powerful searchlights whose long fingers feel the horizon and point the way for ships at sea.

The man who is the best lighthouse keeper, looking out for his future, is the one who is laying aside something regularly in the bank, or through personal insurance or savings bonds, or through the purchase of his home. Any of these methods will help to assure good housekeeping in his retirement years.

Girls Are Enjoying Arts And Craft

The girls of all the communities are enjoying their arts and craft classes each day from 2:00 to 4:30 in the afternoon at both YMCA's. The most popular items now are articles made of plaster and the girls use their own imagination in the painting.

Also there is available sewing, weaving, gimp braiding, bead stringing, and shellcraft. Mrs. Frances Funderburk in a word to the mothers says, "your daughter can learn, share, develop character and just have a good time at these classes. Give her a dime or so and see what she will bring you home in her little hot hand and say she made it herself."

A Stunning Blow To Textile Mills

Although the textile industry was severely criticized by Senator Gore and others because of its activity in connection with the foreign trade bill which is being considered by Congress, it is our opinion that an even more militant program should be promptly begun to protect the life of the American textile mills.

The recent action of the State Department in agreeing to drastic cuts in textile tariffs at Geneva should blow the bugle for an all-out campaign to prevent the destruction of millions of jobs in the United States and the sacrificing of one of America's greatest industries.

There can be no question but that the action taken at the Geneva Conference flashed on a green light to the Japanese textile industry to "ship your goods into the United States" and virtually take over the American market.

It is our understanding that the tariff reductions agreed to comprise 80% of the total items manufactured in the United States. These reductions include fabrics made in our local mills. It is generally known that in some instances where major tariff reductions were agreed to there is already an overproduction in the United States and curtailment is in effect. It is most difficult to understand why any fairminded delegation would agree to tariff reductions on textile items that are already over-produced in the United States and are selling at actual losses to American mills.

Unfortunately, the textile industry is in a difficult plight even without this stunning blow. The industry as a whole compares unfavorably with other major industries in the United States. Even under existing conditions the outlook has been very gloomy. Stockholders and employees in the industry have not been able to keep pace with the other major industries in the country. The recent Geneva action practically says "to heck with the American mills and their employees." We cannot help but wonder if there is not more going on behind the scenes in connection with the foreign trade situation than has been publicized. The textile industry cannot survive in competition with mills paying 10% of the wages paid in the United States. It is now common knowledge that the Japanese mills are modern and their efficiency and quality are high.

It is nothing less than stupid to believe that the Japanese and other countries will not take full advantage of the opportunity to ship textiles into the United States and undersell the American mills. In reality they have been invited to do so.

It is, therefore, high time that the true issue is forced to the forefront. If the State Department and others want to sacrifice the textile mills on the altar of international relations, let's make them come out and say so. We are among those not willing to give up our industry without waging a vigorous, militant battle. Time is of the essence. We cannot wait.

DOGS
by Farley Manning

WONDER DOG

Every few years a dog comes along whose uncanny ability to understand commands confounds the experts.

Currently, Kid, a six year old cross bred female, believed to be part Labrador Retriever and part Airedale, is confusing everyone by doing things that the books say a dog can't do.

Owned by 74 year old Horace S. Gatchell, she tours from coast to coast exhibiting her abilities. On a recent trip to New York she confounded a room full of old timers in the dog world by picking out blondes, brunets and redheads in the crowd when apparently beyond the sight of the trainer.

Tested by Chicago University psychologists for two days she showed every indication of understanding the 2,000 words her owner claims she knows. According to reports, Kid also followed many complicated commands such as a request to pick a map from among the magazines and papers on a table which she did without hesitation.

The psychologists were said to be particularly impressed by her ability to pick out red, yellow and green cards on command, since dogs are generally believed to be color blind. However, research to determine what color dog food dogs like best by the Swift Nutritional Research Kennels, also in Chicago, has indicated that if dogs can't determine color they can certainly determine shade. So this test seems less surprising than some of the others.

For instance, Kid picked out the baldest man in the room, which was presumably quite a chore in a room full of college professors.

On Thursday night, June 16 Proximity Office shut out the League leading White Oak Acorns 5 to 0 to gain a tie in the league standings. The Electric team took a 8 to 1 lead in the first two innings and then scored 2 more in the third. The Rayon made a good come back, but it was not enough to conquer the lead. We Can Only Sell Good Work

The head of a very prominent business said a short while ago:

"Not a wheel can turn, until someone goes out and sells." He might have added, "And we can only sell good work."

Think it over. The only reason any organization is "in business" is to serve the public—the customer. Unless we have sales—unless we have customers—we just can't stay in business very long.

That sounds so simple. Yet, sometimes we are all inclined to forget that fact. A business exsits to serve the customer—not to make jobs for people. A business makes jobs only as it is able to convince more and more customers to buy what it turns out.

Let's never forget it. Sales keep us in business and in jobs. And the only way we can keep sales and customers coming our way is by turning out good work every day. (You wouldn't buy inferior work either, would you?).

Good work helps make sales—and keeps business and jobs going.

LISTEN AMERICANS!

... by Dr. George S. Benson

DIRECTOR - NATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM
Searcy, Arkansas

During the conflict between Joseph Stalin and Leon Trotsky for control of the communist machine in Russia in 1924, a blueprint of world conquest was drafted by the Stalinites. Stalin wrested control from Trotsky and later had him murdered. This blueprnt of conquest, according to Dr. Fred Schwarz, the noted Australian scholar on communism, calls for the conquering of Asia first, then Africa, then Western Europe, then "to isolate, degenrate and, if necessary, devastate the United States."

International Communism today is following this blue print, Dr. Schwarz said, He spoke at the 16th Freedom Forum, conducted by The National Education Program at Searcy Arkansas. He said the Communists use five steps in their technique of conquering, and that they are concentrating at the present time in Asia. The steps are:

1. Conquest of the minds of the youth by use of Communist-prepared or Communist-infiltrated books.
2. Organization of the intelligentsia of those youth into the Communist Party.
3. Scientific survey of what that particular country wants; then promise it to them. (For instance, the Chinese coolies and the socialist intellectuals wanted land to be redistributed; the Communists promised agrarian reform.)
4. Conquest, war, and revolution.
5. Scientifically imposed control by the dictatorship of the proletariat. (This is accomplished by destruction of those who oppose the Party. Our U. S. Government investigators have estimated that 30,000,000 Chinese have been murdered since the Reds took over China.)

Dr. Schwarz believes that to successfully combat Communism, which has grown from 17 people in 1903 to iron control of 900,000,000 today, the U.S.A. muse conduct a positive educational and propaganda program among the youth of the world.

The Communists are spending billions on a massive literature barrage which is being concentrated today in the Orient, India and Africa. These are the areas toward which the Red masters are aiming their conquest at the moment. It is authentically estimated that they are spending $300,000,000 a year in America on books, pamphlets and projects to infiltrate America's mass media of communication. Every written or spoken line in this vast thoughtshaping campaign is shrewdly calculated to engender hate against America and the American capitalistic system.

Yes, we are engaged in a titanic battle for men's minds. And in the minds of our youth the tide of battle will turn. Not only is it necessary to spread world-wide the truth about America, it is even more urgently necessary that our own youth know these facts and thrill to their incomparable advantages under the stars and stripes.

Health For All

KEEP WALKING

The power failed. In the great city the millions of tiny hand cars that carried the people even the shortest distance from bed to breakfast table stopped moving. For a long time the people clung to the cars on which they depended, but hunger and finally panic set in. On hands and knees, they began to crawl in search of food and safety. Helpless, hopeless, they died by the thousands as their beautiful civilization ground to a halt.

Science fiction? Of course. A writer's dream of the future when man's feet have become as useless as his appendix.

Could it happen? Look out the window at a beautiful June day. You would not want to lose the power of walking down a country road or even a city street on such a day. But how often do you do it? Do you really walk, or just get around? If you started out right now, how soon would you tire?

Muscles have to be used, or they lose tone and weaken. Our feet are a remarkably delicate assembly of small bones and muscles. To do their job, they must be kept at peak efficiency.

But, you say, I'm a housewife and I'm on my feet just about every minute the live-long day. You may be on them, but do you really use them? Do they carry you comfortably, or just shuffle along complaining at every step?

It is lucky that our feet do not suffer and grow weak without complaining. If they are in trouble, we get pain signals not only from the feet themselves but also from the back and the head. We feel tired all over.

We can prevent foot trouble by practicing correct walking methods. Take a good walk now and then, and when you do, use your whole body, and swing your legs from the hips. Always walk with your feet parallel, and put them down with the whole sole touching the ground. Shoes must be correctly fitted. If you only have to sit and look pretty, spike heels will do, but if your feet must work, low solid heels are the thing.

You may be the first to order one of those little machines to speed you through your household tasks, but let's keep the power of walking for pleasure with pleasure.

Try Skewer Cookery-It's Spectacular, Yet Simple

Skewer cookery never fails to intrigue guests although the idea is far from new. It originated centuries ago in the Near East when Armenian shepherds impaled their food on sticks and cooked it over open fires.

Shish Kebab, the dish Armenians made famous, is made easily by broiling alternated chunks of lamb, green pepper and onion on skewers. Californians, finding it ideal for outdoor barbecues, helped spread its fame and specialty restaurants popularized a flaming version by serving it on long swords tipped with ignited cotton.

For large or small parties, indoors or out, Shish Kebab is a dish well worth looking into. With rice, a green salad and goblets of cool, sparkling ale, it provides a festive menu that's perfect for informal entertaining.

The recipe is one of ten in the handy leaflet, "Favorite Recipes For Backyard Barbecues." Copies of the leaflet are free to anyone who sends a request to Smart Hospitality, Room 1020, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, New York.

SHISH KEBAB FOR A CROWD

- 1 leg of lamb (5 to 7 pounds), boned
- 1 peeled, minced clove garlic
- 1/3 cup salad or olive oil
- 1/3 cup vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 teaspoon crushed oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed thyme
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 8 to 10 green peppers
- 16 to 20 small white onions

Have your meatman remove bone from leg of lamb. Cut boned lamb into 2-inch chunks, removing gristle and most of fat. Combine garlic, salad or olive oil, vinegar, pepper, oregano, thyme, and salt. Pour marinade over lamb chunks in shallow pan and let stand in refrigerator at least 1 hour or overnight. Cut seeded peppers into 2-inch pieces. Cut peeled onions into halves. When ready to cook, alternate marinated lamb chunks, green pepper pieces and halved onions on 8 to 10 long metal skewers. Brush vegetables with olive oil or melted butter. Broil 3 inches from heat source or over coals until tender, about 15 minutes, turning skewers to brown food evenly. To serve, push off onto individual plates. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

For Shish Kebab for fewer guests, order lamb shoulder or part of a leg of lamb. And, if you like tomatoes with Shish Kebab, be sure to broil them separately since they cook more quickly than the lamb, green pepper and onion. Allow at least one tomato for each serving and select ripe but firm tomatoes. Cut each into four to six wedges, depending upon their size, then thread the tomato pieces on a skewer and broil only until heated and lightly browned.

THE ECONOMIC FACTS OF LIFE

from American Economic Foundation

In what was the most important British election of this century, the campaign slogan of the victorious Conservative Party was "Freedom Works."

As you will remember, in the 1945 election the Labor Party (socialist party) swept into power on a wave of public dissatisfaction with the living standards in England.

Socialist sympathizers throughout the world hailed this victory as the beginning of a new golden age in England: the laboring man was at last living under a government of laboring men, for laboring men, and by laboring men.

One of the first steps was to increase taxes until there were almost no large incomes left in Britain.

The number of incomes amounting to $30,000 or more per year fell from about 7,000 to 70.

Only about one Englishman in a million had as much as $10,000 per year after his taxes were paid.

This confiscation of wealth undoubtedly brought some temporary benefit to the poor people, but it did not last long.

Within four years the socialist government announced, "The very great and highly desirable redistribution of wealth has already taken place. We must, from now on, rely upon the creation of more distributable wealth."

To create this extra wealth and to implement the socialist slogan, "The greatest good for the greatest number," the basic industries of Great Britain were socialized, that is, the stockholders were given public bonds in exchange for their stock and the government took over the ownership and management of the properties.

But instead of getting more and more of the good things of life out of the socialized industries, the British people got less and less.

And instead of faring better under his socialist labor government, the British workingman discovered that labor leaders in the robes of government are tougher to bargain with than private management.

For six years the British people co-operated wholeheartedly with their socialist labor government, and it was not until 1951 that they were sufficently disillusioned to return the Conservatives to power by a slender majority of 17 seats.

The long, difficult task of desocializing industry was begun promptly.

Between 1951 and 1955 the British people had a chance to compare the performance of socialized and privately operated industry, and when they went back to the polls last month, the result was a strong Conservative victory that gave Anthony Eden a majority of 59 seats.

Incidentally, this is the first time in 90 years that any British political party in power increased its majority (because usually the party in power picks up no new friends but does create new political enemies).

The prime reason for this Conservative victory was the increased prosperity which was achieved in spite of the decrease in economic aid from America.

The socialists talked about the greatest good for the greatest number, but the Conservatives delivered the greatest GOODS for the greatest number.

Coming at a time in American history when the possibility of a socialistic labor government is very real, this lesson, learned the hard way by our British cousins, could be a valuable object lesson to us.

It will be a dreary episode in the life of America if we ever become sufficiently fascinated by the mirage of government-guaranteed security and prosperity to forget life's basic truth—freedom works better.
